Summary

Emerson's results for fiscal 2020 are likely to benefit from strength across most key process and hybrid end markets as well as growth in the company's long cycle businesses. Also, it is likely to gain from acquisitions. The company is rewarding shareholders handsomely through dividends and share buybacks. Notably, it repurchased shares worth $129 million in fiscal first quarter apart from dividend disbursement of $305 million. However, the stock has underperformed the industry over the past six months. Also, rising costs of sales have been an issue for Emerson. For fiscal 2020, the company predicts sales to decline 2% to rise 2% year over year compared with 6% rise in fiscal 2019. Also, headwinds in currency translation might be detrimental. In addition, analysts have become increasingly bearish about the company over the past 30 days.

Overview

Headquartered in St. Louis, MO, Emerson Electric Co. is a diversified global manufacturing and technology company, with presence in Europe, the Americas, and Asia, Middle East & Africa. It offers a wide range of products and services to customers in consumer, commercial and industrial markets.

The company reports revenues under two operating segments:

- Automation Solutions (68.6% of total revenues in first-quarter of fiscal 2020): The segment provides measurement and analytical instrumentation, valves, actuators and regulators, industrial solutions, and process control systems and solutions.

Notably, the segment sells its products globally through various distribution channels like network of sales representatives, direct sales force and independent distributors. Notably in the United States, half of the products are sold through a direct sales force, while the rest mainly through independent sales representatives and distributors. In Europe and Asia, the segment primarily employs a direct sales force.

- Commercial and Residential Solutions (31.4%): The segment provides products and services used in commercial air conditioning, residential cooling and heating, industrial and commercial refrigeration, and cold chain management. Also, the segment offers professional tools and appliance solutions.

This segment employs a direct sales channel in an effort to distribute its products and solutions to end users and original equipment manufacturers. It also uses online retailers and independent distributor networks to market its products in various countries.

Notably, the company's two business segments feature market leading brands, consisting of differentiated products within their respective markets. The company's diverse portfolio of products includes leading brands like Aventics, Bettis, Branson, DeltaV, Copeland, Dixell and Fusite.

Reasons To Buy:

- ▲ Emerson is experiencing continued strength across most key process and hybrid end markets in the Americas and Europe region as well as healthy demand in Asia, Middle East & Africa region. Solid growth in the company's long cycle businesses, supported by strength across final control and systems businesses is likely to augment the top-line performance in the quarters ahead. In addition, robust backlog level at the company's Automation Solutions segment and increased bookings for several large liquefied natural gas projects are likely to boost its revenues. Notably, at the end of the fiscal first quarter, backlog for the segment increased 7% to about $5 billion on a sequential basis.
- ▲ Acquisitions have been Emerson's preferred mode of business expansion. Acquired assets boosted its sales by 1% in both the fourth quarter of fiscal 2019 and first quarter of fiscal 2020. The company used $469 million and $73 million for making acquisitions (net of cash acquired) in fiscal 2019 and first quarter of fiscal 2020, respectively. Several buyouts completed by the company during 2019, the integration of Intelligent Platforms business of General Electric (in February 2019) with the Automation Solutions segment is worth mentioning. Notably, the buyout has been expanding Emerson's opportunities across process and discrete industries as well as hybrid markets like metals and mining, food and beverage, life sciences, and packaging.
- ▲ Emerson tries to provide higher remuneration to shareholders on the back of dividend payments and share buybacks. Notably, the company repurchased shares worth $129 million in fiscal first quarter apart from dividend disbursement of $305 million. It is worth noting that in November 2019, the company hiked annual dividend rate by 4 cents for fiscal 2020. Moving ahead, it intends to provide higher returns on the back of stronger free cash flow generation. For fiscal 2020, the company anticipates operating cash flow of $3.15 billion and free cash flow of $2.5 billion. In addition, it intends to repurchase $1,500 million of shares in fiscal 2020, higher than $1,250 million in fiscal 2019.

Emerson's dominant position in key markets, diverse portfolio of products, and acquisitions are likely to drive its near-term profitability.

Reasons To Sell:

- ▼ Over the past six months, Emerson's shares have lost 21.8%, wider than the industry's decline of 17.5%. In first-quarter fiscal 2020, the company's sales lagged estimates by 0.4%. The company was adversely impacted by persistent weakness in the global discrete manufacturing and North American upstream oil and gas end markets. As a matter of fact, it expects the weakness to persist in both these markets in the near term. For fiscal 2020, the company predicts sales to decline 2% to rise 2% year over year compared with 6% rise in fiscal 2019. Also, underlying sales are expected to witness 2% decline to 2% increase. On a segmental basis, net sales of Automation Solutions are likely to fall 1% to jump 3%, while Commercial & Residential Solutions net sales are projected in the range of 4% decline to breakeven. In addition, analysts have become increasingly bearish about the company over the past 30 days. The company's earnings estimates for fiscal 2020 have decreased from $3.66 per share to $3.15 on five downward estimate revisions versus no upward.
- ▼ Rising costs and expenses have been an issue for Emerson over the past few quarters. For instance, the company recorded year-over-year increase of 0.5% and 0.3% in the cost of sales in the fourth quarter of fiscal 2019 and first quarter of fiscal 2020, respectively. Moreover, the company's long-term debt in the last three fiscal years (2017-2019) increased 4.1% (CAGR). Notably, at the end of first-quarter fiscal 2020, the company's long-term debt was $4,018 million, up 52.1% year over year. High-debt levels can increase the company's financial obligations and prove detrimental to its profitability.
- ▼ Emerson's operations are spread across the world, majority of which are outside the United States. Therefore, these are more prone to global economic and political risks as well as unfavorable movement in foreign currencies. For instance, unfavorable movements in foreign currencies adversely impacted sales by 2% and 1% in the fourth quarter of fiscal 2019 and first quarter of fiscal 2020, respectively. The company believes that forex woes will persist in fiscal 2020, and will adversely impact its sales.

Persistent weakness in the global discrete manufacturing market, high costs and adverse impact of foreign currency translation remain issues for Emerson.

Zacks Style Scores

The Zacks Style Score is as a complementary indicator to the Zacks rating system, giving investors a way to focus on the highest rated stocks that best fit their own stock picking preferences.

Academic research has proven that stocks with the best Value, Growth and Momentum characteristics outperform the market. The Zacks Style Scores rate stocks on each of these individual styles and assigns a rating of A, B, C, D and F. We also produce the VGM Score (V for Value, G for Growth and M for Momentum), which combines the weighted average of the individual Style Scores into one score. This is perfectly suited for those who want their stocks to have the best scores across the board.
