Summary

General Dynamics ended the fourth quarter of 2019 on an impressive note, with both earnings and revenues exceeding the Zacks Consensus Estimate. The company boasts a strong position in the U.S. defense space and overseas, and continues to witness strong order growth, securing some pivotal contracts from the U.S. government and its overseas clients. Product innovation can be expected to expand its footprint in the business jet market. However, rising interest expenses can be a potential headwind for the company's bottom-line growth going ahead. Moreover, delayed payments related to one of its large international vehicle programs in Canada are hurting its cash flow reserve. A comparative analysis of its EV/Sales F12M ratio reflects a gloomy picture. Also, in the past year, shares of General Dynamics have underperformed the industry.

Overview

Headquartered in Falls Church, VA, General Dynamics Corporation engages in mission-critical information systems and technologies; land and expeditionary combat vehicles, armaments and munitions; shipbuilding and marine systems; and business aviation. The company was incorporated in February 1952.

Following CSRA acquisition, the company's Information Systems & Technology (IS&T) segment has been reorganized into Information Technology and Mission Systems segments. The company currently operates through five segments: Aerospace, Combat Systems, Marine Systems, Mission Systems and Information Technology.

The Aerospace segment consists of Gulfstream Aerospace, which manufactures business jets, and Jet Aviation, which provides aircraft maintenance and spare parts. Segment revenues in 2019 summed $9,801 million, representing 24.9% of the company's total revenues.

Combat Systems manufactures combat vehicles, medium-caliber guns, ammunition and ammunition handling systems. Revenues during 2019 came in at $7,007 million, contributing 17.8% to the company's total revenues.

Mission Systems segment provides command, control and intelligence systems solutions. Revenues during 2019 came in at $4,737 million, contributing 12.6% to the company's total revenues.

Marine Systems makes nuclear submarines, surface combatants and auxiliary ships. In 2019, revenues amounted to $9,183 million, comprising 23.3% of the company's total revenues.

The Information Technology segment integrates secure communication systems and networks. Segment revenues in 2019 summed $8,422 million, representing 21.4% of the company's total revenues.

Reasons To Buy:

▲ General Dynamics boasts a strong position in the U.S. defense space and overseas. The recent budgetary amendments under the current U.S. administration tend to strongly favor the company's business line. Notably, the proposed fiscal 2020 defense budget includes a spending provision of $205.6 billion for the U.S. Navy, approximately 6% higher than the previous fiscal budget allotment. It includes the procurement for purchasing 11 new ships, including four submarines. General Dynamics, being one of the two contractors in the world equipped to build nuclear-powered submarines and one of the prime U.S. shipbuilders, should certainly benefit from this increased budget proposal, if approved.

General Dynamics' focus on product innovations should help maintain a steady growth momentum and drive results in the quarters ahead. Positive budgetary amendments also boost growth

▲ During the fourth quarter of 2019, General Dynamics witnessed strong order growth, which was in line with its usual trend. This, in turn, boosted its backlog, which grew 28.1%, year over year, to record-high $86.9 billion. The estimated contract value, at the end of the third quarter, was $35.64 billion, up 2.7% year over year. As a result of these order flows, the company's Aerospace unit reflected a book-to-bill ratio of 1.7 to 1, while the Marine Systems Unit enhanced its backlog in the quarter with a book-to-bill of 8.1 to 1. Notably, significant order intakes, particularly in aerospace and marine, position the company well for 2020 and beyond. Such impressive book-to-bill ratio indicates solid demand for the company's products, thereby bolstering its revenue generation prospects significantly.

▲ From the context of product development, General Dynamics' G600 aircraft received both type and production certification from the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) toward the end of June 2019. Additionally, in the fourth quarter, General Dynamics' Gulfstream G500 received certification approval from the European Aviation Safety Agency, clearing the way for European Union registrations and customer deliveries. As a result, the company successfully delivered its Gulfstream G500 to its first European customer in Georgia. In October 2019, General Dynamics introduced its flagship aircraft in the business jet industry, the Gulfstream G700. Notably, such product innovation along with the major certification approvals is projected to enhance this shipbuilder's footprint in the business jet market, going ahead.

Reasons To Sell:

- ▼ General Dynamics' interest expenses rose 29.2% year over year to $460 million during 2019. Interestingly, the company has been witnessing an upward trend in its interest expenses over the last few years. Interest expenses witnessed a massive surge of 245.6% at the end of 2018 and a rise of 13.2% at the end of 2017. The increase in interest expenses reflects a full year of financing for the CSRA acquisition and additional commercial paper issuances. Such rising expenses can be a potential headwind for the company's bottom-line growth, going ahead. This might have discouraged investors' interest in this stock. Evidently, General Dynamics' share price has only gained 9.7% in the past year compared with the industry's growth of 12.3%.

Delayed payments from a large program is hurting General Dynamics' cash flow. Rising interest expenses are likely to hurt the company's growth prospects.
 - ▼ A comparative analysis of its forward 12-month Enterprise Value/Sales (EV/Sales F12M) ratio reflects a relatively gloomy picture that might be a cause for investors' concern. General Dynamics currently has a forward 12-month EV/Sales F12M ratio of 1.57. Moreover, the company's EV/Sales F12M is higher than that of its industry's 1.51, reflecting the stock to be an overvalued one.
 - ▼ General Dynamics is carrying more commercial paper than anticipated due to delayed payments related to one of its large international vehicle programs in Canada, which is outstanding since the fourth quarter of the last year. Such payment delays affected the company's cash flow from operations. Evidently, the company witnessed a cash inflow of $2,981 million as of Dec 31, 2019, compared to the cash inflow of $3,148 million in the comparable year-ago period. If such payment delays persist, the General Dynamics' cash flow balance may consistently remain under pressure. This, in turn, might reduce the company's ability to reward its shareholders through dividend hikes and share repurchase programs.

Zacks Stock Rating System

We offer two rating systems that take into account investors' holding horizons: Zacks Rank and Zacks Recommendation. Each provides valuable insights into the future profitability of the stock and can be used separately or in combination with each other depending on your investment style.

Zacks Recommendation

The Zacks Recommendation aims to predict performance over the next 6 to 12 months. The foundation for the quantitatively determined Zacks Recommendation is trends in the company's estimate revisions and earnings outlook. The Zacks Recommendation is broken down into 3 Levels; Outperform, Neutral and Underperform. Unlike many Wall Street firms, we have an excellent balance between the number of Outperform and Neutral recommendations. Our team of 70 analysts are fully versed in the benefits of earnings estimate revisions and how that is harnessed through the Zacks quantitative rating system. But we have given our analysts the ability to override the Zacks Recommendation for the 1200 stocks that they follow. The reason for the analyst over-rides is that there are often factors such as valuation, industry conditions and management effectiveness that a trained investment professional can spot better than a quantitative model.

Zacks Rank

The Zacks Rank is our short-term rating system that is most effective over the one- to three-month holding horizon. The underlying driver for the quantitatively-determined Zacks Rank is the same as the Zacks Recommendation, and reflects trends in earnings estimate revisions.

Zacks Style Scores

The Zacks Style Score is as a complementary indicator to the Zacks rating system, giving investors a way to focus on the highest rated stocks that best fit their own stock picking preferences.

Academic research has proven that stocks with the best Value, Growth and Momentum characteristics outperform the market. The Zacks Style Scores rate stocks on each of these individual styles and assigns a rating of A, B, C, D and F. We also produce the VGM Score (V for Value, G for Growth and M for Momentum), which combines the weighted average of the individual Style Scores into one score. This is perfectly suited for those who want their stocks to have the best scores across the board.

Value Score	B
Growth Score	C
Momentum Score	C
VGM Score	B

As an investor, you want to buy stocks with the highest probability of success. That means buying stocks with a Zacks Recommendation of Outperform, which also has a Style Score of an A or a B.
