Summary

Shares of Post Holdings have declined and underperformed the industry in the past three months. The stock came under pressure when it reported first-quarter fiscal 2020 results, wherein the top and bottom lines lagged the Zacks Consensus Estimate. Although sales grew, the bottom line decreased year over year. Further, the company has been witnessing rising SG&A expenses for the past few quarters, which remains a concern. Nevertheless, solid performance in the foodservice segment, driven by growth in Bob Evans side dishes, acts as a top-line driver. Apart from these, increasing trend in gross margin coupled with reduced debt bodes well. Additionally, the company remains poised to expand base with acquisitions.

Reasons To Buy:

▲ Robust Foodservice Performance Aids Top Line: The company's foodservice segment has been performing well for the past few quarters. Sales in the segment increased 3.1% to $420.6 million in the first quarter of fiscal 2020. Moreover, volumes grew 3% on increased egg and potato volumes. Solid performance in Bob Evans side dishes also contributed to the foodservice segment. Prior to this, sales in the segment rose 4.5%, 3.3%, 2.3% and 10.6% in the fourth, third, second and first quarters, respectively. Continuation of the trend is likely to aid the top line.

The company is gaining from strategic buyouts and solid performance in foodservice segment. Also, reduced cost bodes well.

- ▲ Focus on Acquisitions: The company has been actively pursuing acquisitions to expand the customer base. In this regard, the company's acquisition of Latimer Newco 2 Limited in July 2017 led to the addition of Weetabix North America and Weetabix Limited to its portfolio. The latter has now been operating as one of the five company segments. In April 2017, Post Holdings acquired Bob Evans, which strengthened its position in the foodservice and refrigerated retail channels. Some other notable buyouts included National Pasteurized Eggs, Inc in October 2016 and MOM Brands Company in May 2015.
- ▲ Robust Margin Trend Bodes Well: The company has been witnessing solid performance in gross margins for quite some time now. In this regard, gross margin expanded 220 basis points (bps) to 32.4% in the first quarter of fiscal 2020. Earlier, the metric grew 90 bps,180 bps and 190 bps in the second, third and fourth quarters of fiscal 2019, respectively. Such an upside, if continued is likely to have a favorable impact on the company's profitability.
- ▲ Reduced Debt a Bright Spot: Debt level is a measure of financial stability for a company. In this regard, Post Holdings has been gaining from declining trend in debt. The company's debt of $6.4 billion dropped 9.7% in the first quarter of fiscal 2020. The metric fell 2.3% in the fourth quarter of fiscal 2019, following a decline of 12.5% each in the third and second quarters as well as a decrease of 12.4% in the first quarter.

Reasons To Sell:

▼ Stock Seems Overvalued: Considering price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio, Post Holdings looks overvalued when compared with the industry. The stock has a trailing 12-month P/E ratio of 17.64, which is below its median level of 22.77 and the high level of 25.48 scaled in a year. Meanwhile, the trailing 12-month P/E ratio for the industry and S&P are currently pegged at 15.02 and 16.89, respectively.

Continued hike in SG&A expense remain a matter of concern. Also, intense competition acts as a deterrent.

- ▼ Dismal Q1 Results: Post Holdings reported first-quarter fiscal 2020 results, wherein both top and bottom lines missed the Zacks Consensus Estimate. Notably, adjusted earnings were 76 cents per share, missing the Zacks Consensus Estimate of $1.14. Also, the figure decreased 31.5% from the year-ago quarter. Further, the company's sales of $1,456.8 million lagged the consensus mark of 1,463 million. We note that shares of the company have decreased 23.2% in the past three months, underperforming the industry's decline of 17.6%.
- ▼ High SG&A Costs: The company has been witnessing increasing SG&A expenses for the past few quarters. Notably, the metric rose 8.4% to $235.5 million in the first quarter of fiscal 2020. Further, SG&A expenses, as a percentage of sales, expanded 80 bps to 16.2% in the reported quarter. Prior to this, SG&A expenses increased 2.3% to $245.5 million in the last reported quarter. Persistence of the trend may weigh on the company's bottom line in the near term.
- ▼ Stiff Competition: Post Holdings faces intense competition from other companies belonging to the consumer food and beverage and convenient nutrition category. It competes with these players on grounds of pricing strategies, quality of products, brand recognition, nutritional value, promotional activities and customer services. The company's inability to stay afloat amid such competition may result in the loss of market share and adversely impact its business.
